THE
SOUTH-CAROLINA GAZETTE,
Containing the freſheſt Advices, Foreign and Domeſtick.
Monday, September 19*th*, 1743. [Numb. 495.]

From the GENTLEMEN'S MAGAZINE for May, 1743.

THERE is ſcarce a Country in Europe, at preſent, where the People are not, more or leſs, out of Humour with their Governors. In Sweden the Complaints of the People are expreſſed in a Manner not altogether unknown in this Country, and which, in miniſterial Language, they call Libels, have driven ſome Miniſters to think of * reſigning, and others upon worſe Shifts. To ſay the Truth, one can ſcarce think the Folks much to blame; ſince for Three Years together they have been engaged in what was called the Nation's War, dragg'd into it by Patriots, who thereby forced themſelves into the Miniſtry, and who have thought of nothing but levying Forces, raiſing Money, and making a Buſtle ever ſince.

In Ruſſia we hear, from Time to Time, of the Severities the mildeſt Princeſs in the World is forced to make uſe of, in order to reſtrain warm People from talking diſreſpectfully not of her Adminiſtration only but of her Perſon. This I verily believe to be a hard Caſe, but in a Country where ſo many and quick Revolutions have happened, where Corruption flouriſhed ſo long, and where Loyalty is of ſo late a Growth, we muſt naturally expect that Stirs will frequently happen; for, a broken Conſtitution, like a broken Leg, will ſmart at every Turn of Weather, let it be ever ſo well ſet. Theſe Fits of Diſcontents, however, will be quickly over, and when a Corner of Siberia is peopled with bad Subjects, the reſt of the Empire will know and acknowledge the Wiſdom and Lenity of that Adminiſtration, with which they are ſo happily bleſs'd at preſent.

In Denmark, where the King is contriving to perform mighty Things for his Family, the People are not a little afraid of their being leſs at Eaſe when their Monarch is becoming greater. They have long experienced the Advantages of Peace, and were leſs afraid of the great Body of Troops their Sovereign kept up, becauſe they were inclined to hope he meant to make no other Uſe of them than letting them out; and as they did then no other Duty than that of parading and encamping, there was ſo much good Blood ſaved, and at the ſame Time a great deal of good Money got. But now the Scene, they think, is on the Point of being changed, and the King, inſtead of making War in Jeſt for his Neighbours, is on the Point of entring into it in Earneſt for the Sake of his Family. But, I am apt to think, they are a little too haſty in their Apprehenſions. For as his Daniſh Majeſty is a very wiſe Prince, and knows the Value of Men and Money as well as any Monarch in Europe, ſo I am thoroughly ſatisfied that he will content himſelf with martial Appearances, and not riſque his own and his Kingdom's Safety by liſtening to the Propoſals of a divided Nation.

In Spain the Inhabitants are diſtracted, to ſee Providence change their Miniſters ſo often, and their Prince, or rather Princeſs, continue obſtinate in purſuing wrong Meaſures. † They have, from Time to Time, been promiſed mighty Things, have been everlaſtingly diſappointed, and yet have everlaſtingly believed the ſame idle Tales, and are like to purſue the ſame ruinous Track. They are already Beggars and Slaves, and if there be any Thing worſe in Nature, they are in the utmoſt Danger of being ſtill worſe. Alberoni pillaged them to ſteal Sicily; Ripperda plundered them to gain Parma and Placentia; Patinho fleeced them to perform what the others had only ſchemed; and Campillo owed his Reputation to his extorting from an already exhauſted People, the Supplies demanded for the Execution of his Predeceſſor's Plan. The Head of his Succeſſor is, in all Probability, full of as deſtructive Projects; but as in their Progreſs, Difficulties grew ſtill more and more numerous, there is Reaſon to hope, that an Appoplexy may carry him off ſooner than the two Blood-ſuckers that went before him; for, this is certainly the only Chance the Nation has of ſurviving the Miniſter. One Year more of the old Meaſures will effectually compleat their ‡ Ruin, and the laſt Expedient of raiſing Money, may be ſelling themſelves for Negroes to their own Plantations, if there be any Money left to purchaſe, or Ships to tranſport them thither.

In France the King has not yet determined on replacing his old Miniſter, and his Subjects, taught by their Sufferings, wou'd be glad to ſee the Court fix upon ſome new Scheme. They are quite weary of the Jeſuits Arts, the Eloquence of one Marſhal, and the Gaſconade of the other. They wiſh for another Colbert, who knew how to manage Wars when he was forced into them, to get out of them as ſoon as an Opportunity offer'd, and to cultivate the the Arts of Peace, when his Maſter would pleaſe to conſent to let him. They are ſick of ſeeing People torn from the Plow, and from behind the ‖ Counter, to ſerve for Chopping-Blocks to Broglio and Penſaw; they are vexed to have their Money ſent abroad to feed an unſucceſsful War, which would be even more infamous than it is, if one Victory had attended it; and they languiſh under the Effects of that pernicious Policy which inclines Monarchs and Miniſters to fancy they cannot make a great Figure at Home, if they do not make other Nations wretched abroad; becauſe they ſee that this Policy is ſo well underſtood, that they are in Danger of periſhing ſome Time or other from the ſpringing up of a Spirit of Precaution amongſt their Neighbours. If

* Count de Teſſin in a Memorial to the King, after a ſhort Recital of his Services, complains of ſeveral Inſinuations in Print, that there are among the Miniſters, Men whoſe private Intereſt, Ambition, and Devotion to a Foreign Power, had made to forget their Duty, &c. But as he could not, without being totally inſenſible, help being concern'd at ſuch Imputations, he appeals to every Swede, before the Tribunal of Almighty God and before his Majeſty, for the Purity of his Sentiments; earneſtly requeſting a Diſcuſſion from all his Employments, and as a further Favour, that his Majeſty will cauſe his Conduct to be carefully enquired into, his Name and Family admitting of no Demur in a Caſe of ſuch Importance.— This Gentleman, however, reſolutely declares for the Duke of Deux-Ponts, whoſe Pretenſions to the Succeſſion are ſupported by France, where he was Ambaſſador from Sweden ſome Years, as M. Van Hecy from the Dutch; and that Air is ſuppoſed to have had a bad Effect upon each.

† This Court having reſolved to ſend ſeveral Battalions of Militia, and 16 Companies of Grenadiers to reinforce the Army of Don Philip, the firſt Battalion has mutiny'd on the 2d Day's March, fix'd their Bayonets, and refus'd to carry Arms out of the Kingdom, alledging it was contrary to their Conſtitution, and above 400 of them returned Home with Drums beating and Colours flying.

‡ This, or a Peace, muſt ſoon happen, if the King of Portugal has acceded to the Treaty of London; which the Court of Spain ſo far ſuſpects, that 20,000 Men are ordered to that Frontier.

‖ A late Edict orders that beſides the Militia, Gentlemens Servants ſhall draw Lots to go into the Army.

If we turn towards Germany, we shall see a mighty Empire suffering by the Mistakes of one Man, and those Mistakes flowing from the Gratification of his Passions, at the Expence of his Understanding, since no Body knows better than himself how much he is in the wrong. We see those who suffer perplexed between the Sense they have of the Mischiefs which they feel, and of that Respect which they own to be due to their Sovereign. They complain, and they have Reason to complain, but when they look abroad for Redress they are not a little puzzled to find it. It is but a bad Receipt in political Physic, that contrary Poisons expel each other; and the Germans know by Experience, how possible it is for one Army of Foreigners to contend with another for many Campaigns at the Expence of Germany, while each Party pretends to be fighting for its Good. In this Condition, to be still is to be ruined, and to be restless is no sure Way to Relief; so that, on the whole, if ever any People had Reason to confide in Providence these are they, for at present they seem to have no other Friend.

There is indeed one Court in the World (I mean besides our own) upon which an honest Man may look with Pleasure. The Reader readily guesses that I mean that of VIENNA, where an heroic Princess is seated on the Throne of her Ancestors, and, like our Queens Elizabeth and Anne, demonstrates what a Nation may do when thoroughly united. Her Minister, who is alike distinguished by his high Birth and great Qualities, pursues with equal Ardour the Interest of his Mistress and her Subjects. He supplies a devouring War, by cutting off the superfluous Expences of Government. He has suspended Salaries, he has annihilated Pensions. His Reputation for Probity renders him successful in all his Negociations; and that Reputation rises not from the Warmth of his Professions, but from his Punctuality in acting. At this Court People are chearful in the worst of Circumstances; the Queen of Hungary and Bohemia is as happy in her Subjects as they are in Her. She lives and reigns but for their Good, and therefore, with a rational Loyalty, they are ready to die for her Service.

BOHEMIA

Prague, May 21. Letters from before Egra mention, that the Mortality there continues, 30 dying each Day, so that the Town must soon fall into our Hands. The Ceremony of the Queen's Coronation was perform'd May 12, against which a Herald protested in Behalf of the Emperor. Just as she was entering the Church, she received an Account from Prince Charles of Lorrain of the utter Defeat of 7000 Bavarians near Braunau, May 9 commanded by C. Ahnetzi, who with the Generals Preising and Gebrieli were taken Prisoners, as also Colonels Weissenberg, Meiners, two other Hessian Colonels, and in all 2100 Soldiers, among whom was the Partizan La Croix, besides some Standards and the Enemy's Cannon. The kill'd and wounded of the Austrians did not exceed 100 Men, amongst which were 2 Colonels, 2 Lieutenants and an Ensign. After this Defeat of the French at Braunau, her Majesty's Army pursued the Advantage, and in a few Days made themselves Masters of Landhut, Deckendorff, Landau, and Natterberg; in the former they found but one House and the Church standing; for the French had plundered it for Three Days, and left it in Flames; they had also begun to set fire to the other Towns, which Acts of Inhumanity have entirely set the Country against them. General Hohenlohe's Corps is 15,000 Men, Prince Charles's 30,000, Prince Lobkoui z 17,000 and 2500 before Egra. From hence they will be reinforced with 3000, the Desertion of the French is very considerable since the Defeat at Braunau; they have abandoned Burghausen to us, and our Parties range up to the Gates of Munich, from whence the Emperor is retir'd to Ingolstadt.

GERMANY.

The English and allied Army were within a few Leagues of the French Forces, commanded by Marshal Noailles, but since the irresistible Progress of the Austrians, these last are in inexpressible Confusion. Thirty four Waggons laden with Provisions, &c. they sent on the 22d Instant to Worms from Heidelberg, and on the 25th fetch'd them back again.

SWEDEN

Our Hopes of an approaching Peace are destroy'd, the Russian Plenipotentiaries having made very disagreeable Propositions.

Our Admiral Falkengreen has sunk some Russian Ships, one of which had a considerable Sum for the Payment of their Troops, and burnt a large Quantity of Wood for shipping in one of their Ports. The Swedish Fleet at Carelscrown, consists of 13 Ships of War. The Danish 18.

MUSCOVY.

The late Motions of Schach Nadir towards our Frontiers, were only Feints to conceal his true Intention against the Turks, against whom he is now actually turning his Force. On the 15th Inst. the Council ordered 18,000 Men to embark for a Descent on Swedeu.

ITALY.

Geneva, May 19. Four hundred of the Spanish Miquelets attack'd the Fort La Tuile, on the Borders of the Vald Aost, in order to obtain a Passage into Italy, but Baron Leutrey, who commands the Piedmontese Troops in those Parts, sent against them some Companies of Granadiers, who kill'd 120 of them, and put the rest to Flight with the Loss of 25 Men only. Another Body of 800 Miquelets endeavoured to make their Way at Canis, but were repulsed by the Militia. An Envoy Extraordinary is arrived at Turin from Dresden, to conclude the Marriage of the Princess Eleonor of Savoy with the Prince Royal of Poland.

The Spanish Army under M. de Gages, is said to be reduced almost to 4000 Men, and about 1500 sick or wounded, that General therefore, despairing of Succours is fortifying himself at Rimini. The King of Spain expecting a Resource in the Change of Generals, has given the Command of this Army to the Duke of Modena; and for M. de Gage's Comfort sent him a Compliment for his late Conduct.

HOLLAND

The Troops of the Republick, intended to garrison the Towns of Mons, Ath, Charleroi and St Guislain, are marching to those Places. The grand Affair of the March of the 20,000 Men for succouring the Queen of Hungary, under the entire Direction, and wholly at the Disposition of her Majesty, passed May 17, in the Assembly of the States General, to the great Joy of all Well wishers of the common Cause, and next Day it was to pass the Resumption there; and still further Measures were to be entered into in Concert with that Princess and his Britannick Majesty. The 20,000 Men above mentioned, are to encamp between Namur and Maestricht. This Affair was much forwarded by the Presence of the Lord Carteret, who had several Conferences on this Subject with the principal Members of the Government, to whom in his Master's Name, he promised to guaranty the Queen of Hungary's Promise to abolish the Ostend Company, and if this not satisfy them, he had full Powers to ratify it in Writing, which being too good an Offer for the States to refuse, was accordingly done.

P S. Braunau was taken Sword in Hand by the Austrians, the 1st of June, N S. and between 4 and 5000 French kill'd and taken.

London, May 28. We hear that Philip Cavendish, Esq; Admiral of the Blue, will be made Admiral of the White, in the Room of Sir Charles Wager, deceas'd, and that the rest of the Admirals will succeed according to their Seniority.

CHARLES-TOWN, September 19.

On Monday last the Guns were fired from Granville's Bastion and Broughton's Battery, and his Majesty's Ships in the Harbour, on the agreeable News of the Victory obtain'd by his Britannick Majesty's Army (See the Postscript) over a superior one of the French, commanded by the Marshal Duke de Noailles; the Battle was fought near a Village call'd Dettingen, on the River Mayne: The Night was concluded with Illuminations, Bonfires and other publick Demonstrations of Joy on that Occasion.

Last Wednesday, News being brought that a large French built Ship was met with on this Coast not far from this Harbour, in Distress, having lost her Rudder, and her Top-Masts either carried away or struck, and supposed to one of those lately bound from the Havanna to Old Spain with with great Treasure, and to have met with the Gale of Wind which was felt here the 30th past, Captain Newsham in his Majesty's Snow the Spy immediately fell down, and attempted to get out in the Night, having placed Lights in the Bar for that Purpose, and got the Assistance of the Barges belonging to the Rye and Flamborough In the Morning early he got out. And a few Hours after, the Privateer commanded by Captain Fennell got out also, to go in Pursuit of the said Ship.

On Friday his Majesty's Snow the Swift, commanded by Captain Bladwell arriv'd here; of whose Cruize we hear nothing remarkable, but that he left Cape Fear River the Day before.

We hear, That the Ship commanded by Capt. Scott, was, in her Passage to this Place from Boston, taken some Time last Month, by a Spanish Privateer of 80 Hands, who put 10 Spaniards on board, and sent her to the Havanna And, that the said Privateer, soon after happily chasing the Virginia Station Ship, (the South Sea Castle of 40 Guns, Capt. Dandridge) was taken and carried into that Place, with Capt. Scott on board The Spaniards left on board Capt. Scott's Ship, five Englishmen and a Woman-Passenger.

Private LETTERS from Persons of Distinction in the Army at HANAU, to their Friends in LONDON, &c.

Hanau, about 1 at Noon, June the 18*th*, 1743.

Dear Friend,

ORDERS were given for our immediate Departure from Aschaffenburgh, and for the March of all the Baggage and Army, with a Design to extend ourselves towards this Place, in order to disappoint the French in the Attempt they might otherwise have made, to cut off our Junction with the Hessians and Hanoverians, who were coming up to join us, and were arrived near this Town: Accordingly, we all left Aschaffenburgh about Eight in the Evening on Wednesday last the 15*th*, and the whole Army, with his Majesty and all his Attendants, were in Motion soon after; which being observed by the French, they also struck their Tents, and began to march in the Night, in order to be at hand to prevent our joining, and made such Expedition therein, that they had crossed the River Mayne, with the greatest Part of their Army, by the Time we had got about Six English Miles from Aschaffenburgh towards this Place, and near a little Village or Town called Dettingen, which obliged our Baggage, which was foremost, to return, and the Army to form itself immediately into Order of Battle, which there was not Time to do before they began Cannonading all our Troops in their March, from several Batteries they had erected on the other Side of the Mayne: And as our Forces were thus unexpectedly catch'd, and obliged so precipitately to face the Enemy, under several Disadvantages, and that of the Ground they were upon in particular, scarce any Body was without Apprehensions of their being worsted in the Engagement, which began about Eight a'Clock in the Morning, the 10th of June, O. S. at Dettingen, and continued with incredible Force and Obstinacy till near three in the Afternoon, when by the Bravery and surprizing Intrepidity of the English Officers and Soldiers, the French were obliged to quit the Field of Battle, and repass the Mayne; in performing which, as well as during the Action, they left great Numbers of Men, and some Officers of Distinction: Many others were also desperately wounded and taken Prisoners, particularly a Marshal du Camp, whose Name I can't remember, and Monsieur de Fenelon, Son to the French Ambassador at the Hague: Monsieur le Duc de Noailles is likewise said to be desperately wounded. I saw with my own Eyes near Twenty Persons, who were said to be great Officers, and by their Dresses appeared so, brought in Prisoners, most desperately wounded, and many of them in such a Way that they could not be expected to live. From three in the Afternoon till near nine a Clock, our People, after the Gross of the remaining Army of the French had repassed the Mayne, were employed in scouring of the Woods, and searching all the adjacent Villages, for Stragglers and Hussars, in order to secure a free Communication for the King's Attendants and Baggage to Hanau, whither it was intended to go, but was stopped by this Incident of the Battle, and obliged to wait its Issue at some Distance till the same was over, when, about nine in the Evening, not a Frenchman being to be seen, but what were Prisoners, or lay killed upon the Field of Battle, we all continued our Journey, as we could not reach Hanau within a reasonable Time at Night, to a little Village near it, and came hither afterwards this Morning, where we are all in perfect Health; and our Army being now extended and encamped near this Place, we shall soon be join'd by 12,000 Troops, Hessians and Hanoverians, when I suppose we shall, in our Turn, attack the French. Several of our oldest Officers declared that they never saw a more obstinate and bloody Battle: We reckon, tho' it is very uncertain, that six Thousand might be killed in the whole, of which, perhaps, Two Thousand might be reckoned of the allied Army. General Clayton is kill'd; the Duke of Cumberland is slightly wounded with a Musquet Shot thro' the lower Part of his Leg; several other Officers are wounded, but we know of none taken Prisoners. You may expect a more certain and regular Account by next Post.

June 16, O. S.

My Lord,

THIS Morning, about Eight a-Clock, the French Army, consisting of between 20 and 30,000 Men, under the Command of Marshal Noailles, having pass'd the Mayne in the Night, attack'd our Army on their March from Aschaffenburgh towards Hanau, whither they were going. The Action continued very hot till about Three a-Clock in the Afternoon, when the French began to give Way, and were entirely routed, and a compleat Victory obtained over them. We drove them full Speed into the River Mayne, which they had been so fool-hardy as to cross, and where no doubt many of them must have perished. This Push was made by Lieutenant General Campbell with a Body of 3000 Horse, who made great Slaughter amongst them. The Blue, together with General Howley's, and General Bland's Regiment, have been severely handled, but behaved gallantly. The Numbers slain in this Action we have not had Time yet particularly to know, but as far as can be guess'd we judge they may amount on both Sides to upwards of 6000, in which Number we cannot reckon our own to be above 1000. The Persons of Distinction who fell on our Side, were only General Clayton, and Major Honywood, but the Wounded were much more considerable. Amongst the latter are his Royal Highness the Duke Cumberland, who was shot in the Leg, and had a beautiful Turky Horse killed under him; Brigadier General Husk, who also received a Shot in his Foot, and General Ligonier wounded in two Places, but not dangerously. Lord Albemarle, and several other General Officers had their Horses killed under them, but received no other Damage. His MAJESTY who was in the Heat of the whole Action, and behaved with the greatest Steadiness and Resolution, had (GOD be prais'd) no Misfortune. We have taken several Officers of Note, many of which are mortally wounded, particularly Monsieur Fenelon, Son to the French Ambassador at the Hague. We are also assured that Monsieur Noailles is himself much wounded, but has escap'd falling into our Hands. As this is the Day on which the Action happened, and you may imagine we are in the greatest Hurry, I cannot give you a more particular Account, but must refer it to another Opportunity, which I hope will soon occur. We are now going to Hanau.

June 16, O. S.

Dear Sir,

THIS is the Evening of a glorious Day; I am just returned from beating the French: I am satisfied that nothing can give you greater Pleasure than this News, and therefore will give you as particular an Account of the Battle as the present Hurry will permit. Very early this Morning we received an Account that the French Army, consisting of 25 000 Men, under the Command of Marshal Noailles, had passed the River Mayne in the Night, in order to attack us before we were joined by the Hessians and Hanoverians.
